MEETINGS & PRIVATE DINING

A Historic House Hotel of the National Trust

Accommodation at Middlethorpe Hall

Standing in twenty acres of its own gardens and parkland, yet 15 minutes from the centre of the historic City of York, Middlethorpe Hall is a William III house built in 1699. It combines the comfort and elegance of country house hospitality with the efficiency demanded by modern businesses.

There are twenty nine bedrooms and suites, ten in the main house, sixteen in the 18th century courtyard, a garden suite and two suites in an adjacent cottage. These range from spacious singles to suites with sitting rooms suitable for small meetings and interviews.

Middlethorpe Hall is now part of the National Trust by donation in September 2008, with all profits benefiting the charity.

The Barlow Room

The self-contained, air-conditioned and naturally-lit meeting room is 50 metres from the main house with direct access from the free car park containing electric car charging points. It is ideal for small conferences, meetings and presentations.

The purpose-built Barlow Room features a plasma screen, free WiFi, air conditioning and Nespresso coffee machine from which delegates can help themselves throughout the day. It has its own cloakroom and there is a rear terrace for breaks and phone calls with garden tables and chairs.

The Barlow Room also has central floor mounted sockets and black-out facilities. A dividing wall gives flexibility to the room, and it is wheelchair accessible.
